The Little Lamp

A Short Story About Courage and Kindness

Chapter 1: A Stormy Evening

In a small village beside a wide river lived a young girl named Mira. She lived with her grandfather in a little house at the edge of the village. Every evening, Mira lit an old brass lamp and placed it near the window. Its warm glow helped travelers find the path home.

One autumn evening, dark clouds gathered over the village. The wind grew stronger, and rain poured across the fields. Soon, the village lost its electricity. People closed their doors and waited for the storm to pass.

Chapter 2: The Lost Traveler

As Mira prepared for bed, she heard a faint knock at the door. An elderly traveler stood outside, soaked by the rain and unable to find the bridge. Mira wanted to help, but the storm frightened her.

Her grandfather handed her the brass lamp. 'Courage does not mean that you feel no fear,' he said. 'It means you choose to do what is right even when you are afraid.'

Chapter 3: A Light in the Darkness

Mira held the lamp high and walked with her grandfather along the safe village path. They guided the traveler to the bridge, where he thanked them warmly. On their way home, Mira noticed that neighbors had placed their own lamps in their windows. Together, the little lights made the dark village seem bright and welcoming.

Chapter 4: The Morning After

By morning, the storm had passed. The traveler visited Mira's house to thank her again. He told the villagers how one small lamp had helped him find safety. From that day on, the villagers agreed to keep lights ready for anyone who might need help.

Moral of the Story

A small act of kindness can bring hope to others, and true courage is doing the right thing even when you feel afraid.
